

INTELLIGENCE REPORT IGNORED BY STATE DEPT.

Haan Data Reveals How WHITE HOUSE AIDES UNDERMINED U. S.

To be forewarned, unfortunately, is not always to be forearmed. And this has had, and is still having, tragic consequences for the American people. For many years a Korean Asian underground espionage leader, Kilsoo Haan, has been trying to warn the United States to act against enemies preparing for the conquest of America.

Many of the intelligence reports that were ignored by the Department of State, Defense Department and the White House will shock you. It's unlikely you will forget the accuracy of those Korean intelligence reports which could have saved thousands of American lives and billions of dollars.

For more than 32 years, Kilsoo Haan has had advance knowledge of enemy military actions planned against the United States. That knowledge was given to proper authorities and executives in Washington in ample time to avert tragic military blows and losses to the United States.

International intrigue, treason and traitors are sinister bed companions and Washington has its share of queer subversives and strange foreign policies. As a result it is depleting our resources and deteriorating our military defenses.

So, we're telling the background story of Kilsoo Haan, an American patriot, dedicated with loyalty to the United States. He heads a Korean underground organization whose agents have penetrated deep into the super-secret foreign office files of Asian nations.

In January of 1941, Haan submitted to the United States Advisory Council of National Defense, the complete 355-page Japanese Imperial High Command book of war plans.

That Japanese document described in detail the plan for the attack on Pearl Harbor, an attack which occurred eleven months later, as outlined!

President Franklin D. Roosevelt was informed well in advance, but he was so involved with commitments on socialization "humanitarian" ideologies of Communist Russia and under the influence of Marxist intellectuals in his cabinet that he ignored the intelligence reports.

The Japanese plans for the "sneak attack" on our American naval base at Pearl Harbor had been stolen and smuggled out to Kilsoo Haan by Korean underground espionage agents.

In March of 1941, Haan gave copies, which were written in Japanese, to the State Department. The document also detailed the plan to send a "peace envoy" to Washington and the Pearl Harbor attack would be made in the midst of those "peace" talks.

In April of 1942, United States Senator Guy Gillette declared: "Kilsoo Haan made the Japanese war plan available to our government agencies prior to the attack on Pearl Harbor."

On December 5, two days before the attack, Haan told Maxwell Hamilton, the State Department's Chief of Far Eastern Affairs:

"It is our sincere belief that December is the month for the Japanese attack and that it is aimed at Hawaii — perhaps the first Sunday in December. Will you please convey this information to the President and to the military and naval commanders in Hawaii?"

In April of 1942, the homosexual Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles, admitted the United States had been warned by Haan the Japanese would attack Pearl Harbor in December, 1942.

The State Department at that time already had become a nest of Communists and homosexuals who have no loyalty or allegiance to any country except to their own conspiratorial objectives. Decadence and corruption take root. Today there are hundreds of thousands of these subversive perverts on federal payrolls still undermining our government; and the White House administrations, instead of getting rid of them, have been coddling them.

Also will be recalled the strange circumstances in which Gen. George Marshall cut off essential military supplies to Gen. Chiang Kai Shek which enabled the Communists to take over Nationalist China. Henry Wallace, whose association with Communists has since been surfaced, also had a role.

This was during the period that President Roosevelt entrenched subversive Communists and homosexual perverts in government in violation of statutes enacted by Congress prohibiting their being on federal payrolls in any capacity, including in Congress.

But those same sinister conditions prevailed when Harry S. Truman entered the White House and have not only continued, but worsened in succeeding White House administrations — even more so when President John F. Kennedy took office and President Johnson succeeded him.

Treason and traitors have since been the rule. The traitor Alger Hiss, who was among those in the State Department who cursed the United States in the creation of the United Nations, is but one of the few.

The Soviet Union plan to create a powerful Red China by 1950 was predicted in 1946 by Haan through information passed to him from underground sources. Nor was this report given consideration. In 1949 Chiang Kai-Shek fled to Formosa.

January of 1950 was the date that Haan first learned of, and passed on to government officials, the news of a Red China-Soviet Russia Mutual Aid Pact.

The agreement was signed by the parties in February of the same year. On January 25, 1950, the State Department wrote Haan and stated, "Your courtesy in sharing your information is appreciated."

As a preventive move, following the signing of the pact, the Korean underground urged the State Department to initiate a "liberation of Manchuria underground movement by August 1950, before Soviet-Red China plans jell."

In May of 1950 Haan reported to the Office of National Defense that Russian and North Korean armies had held joint maneuvers. South Korea was invaded by the joint forces in June of 1950.

"I know you must feel badly over this whole Korean situation. You had the information which could have gone a long way toward preventing this fiasco," wrote Congressman Willis Bradley to Haan in 1951.

Koreans reported that Russians had developed an A-bomb in May 1947. In 1949, our President announced the Russians had exploded their first nuclear fission bomb in Siberia. The Russians announced on Sept. 24, the day after the President's revelation, that they had possessed the bomb since November of 1947.

The Korean underground reported to our Atomic Energy Commission the first Sputnik on June 20, 1954. It revealed Soviet scientists were working on their first space vehicle and it would be launched by 1958. In October of 1957 the first Sputnik went into orbit.

ACCURACY CONFIRMED

A member of the U. S. Senate Committee on Armed Services has followed Haan's reports since 1962 when Haan told of the Cuban-Russian rocket missile buildup.

The Senator is Margaret Chase Smith. On Nov. 11, 1962, she wrote to Haan: "Time has certainly proved the accuracy of your reports."

Kilsoo Haan has been called before Senate investigating committees many times. He has also been consulted by the United Nations.

"They've interviewed me time and time again only to discount my information," Haan says. "After 13 years they vindicate me and say how right my information has been."

150 NUCLEAR RED PLANES

Concerning Russian nuclear powered aircraft, Haan has said:

"Soviet Russia now has 150 thermo-nuclear powered bombers capable of speeds in excess of 3,500 miles per hour. These planes can remain aloft for from 90 to 120 days without refueling. They can lift loads many times greater than anything our planes can carry. And they are not detectable on our radar devices."

The Strategic Air Command has admitted the Soviet nuclear planes have an 85,000-foot cruising flight ceiling. Red planes carry an anti-radar detection device which allows undetected penetration 23 out of 25 times.

"Target date for Communists to begin their all-out attack for world domination is set for the last days of 1965."

Haan forwarded that information to Secretary of State Dean Rusk on Dec. 15, 1962. It stated:

CO-EXISTENCE STRATEGY

"Soviet Embassy officials and Mao Tse-tung held a conference at Mao's official residence in Peking Nov. 2, 1962. Soviet officials urged Mao and Chou En-Lai to revise their strategy and create a climate to ease U. S.-Red China tensions.

"Soviet officials stressed the need and importance of stockpiling grains, industrial products and machines if the Sino-Soviet alliance is to attain its goal of realistic military readiness by 1965."

The report further stated: "Mao observed it would be advantageous to the alliance to fully exploit the Western power's thinking that the Sino-Soviet alliance is in danger and will soon break apart."

This, said Haan, was done to lull suspicions of the United States. And it came to pass.

The Reds used wheat from Russian stockpiles during their three-year crash program in industry to produce nuclear weapons. During that time Soviet farm production was cut to allow the farmers to work in industry.

WHEAT AIDS WAR GOAL

The purchase of American surplus wheat, Haan says, was a must. Some 31 percent of Russian food stockpiles vanished in the crash program for nuclear war preparation, and agricultural production suffered.

"The Russians insisted Romania produce mechanical war necessities and promised 400,000 bushels of wheat in exchange. The
